“ I met Walter at a local establishment what he nicknamed either Mahogany Ridge or the Emporium. He was clever with all his nicknames. I saw him in his hunting clothes and we struck up a conversation regarding the great outdoors. From that a great friendship evolved with our similar passions for all things outdoors and nature. He invited me to go bow hunting with him. I was privileged as he took me to the spots he and his brother Orest started hunted many years ago. His energy and passion for hunting was incredible, still hunting past 80 years old. According to Walter taking an animal was a bonus it was all about being outdoors and "nice to see the animals". Everytime I am hunting I think about Walter, his smile, his kindness and the fun we had together but no worries because as the Lyrics go in the song "Fred Bear" (who is a famous Pioneer of bowhunting) by Ted Nugent, "In the wind he's still Alive". Peace Walter.

“ Tom will miss his hunting stories and Karen will miss him saying it's okay for a lady to be at tracks for a drink! Maggie will miss how nice and welcoming he was whenever we came into the bar and if she'd ever ask a question she was always willing to teach! This is from Tom and Karen Buckley and family!
