

Philip Naso

December 1, 2018

Philip Naso, a resident of Stamford and a native New Yorker, died peacefully on Saturday, December 1st.

Born in NYC in 1922, Philip served in the United States Army during WWII and subsequently embarked on a career as a theatrical hairstylist. Over the course of his career, he garnered 15 movie credits in addition to working on numerous projects in film, TV, and Broadway. After retiring from the entertainment industry, he devoted himself to his family. He was an avid baseball fan and recognizable fixture at his grandchildren's sporting events. Predeceased by Josephine, his wife of 70 years, Philip was a loving father to his son, Ron and daughter-in-law, Jeanne, as well as consistent presence in the lives of his four grandchildren. He was happiest when surrounded by family. He never tired of spending time with family, hearing the latest developments in the lives of his grandchildren, especially when the conversation was accompanied by food. He was creative, generous and a consummate gentleman with an abiding interest and concern with social justice issues.

He is survived by his son, daughter-in-law, and four grandchildren.
